

Lucy Porter

2011 -2018

I knew I wanted to be a vet and made sure to look into the A-Level requirements before I started Sixth Form. It was recommended to do at least two science subjects, so I studied biology, chemistry and maths.

I got accepted at the University of Nottingham and was involved in both subject-related societies including VetSoc and Surgery Soc, as well as The Mic which is an indie music magazine run by the university. To be able to apply to vet school I had to have a wide range of work experience placements as a sixth form student, both in veterinary centres and other animal-based placements including dairy and sheep farming!

I'm now a qualified vet and really enjoying the start of my career as a general practitioner, although a goal of mine is to do a post-graduate certificate in emergency medicine and surgery.

(Dr Lucy Porter, BVMedSci, BVM BVS (hons) MRCVS)